About the Conference

Bharatiya Knowledge System (also known as, Indian Knowledge System), covers a diverse range of ethical, philosophical and practical principles on societal organization and governance and emphasizes on the importance of diplomacy, realpolitik and a well-structured administrative machinery with a detailed legal framework. While the Yoga Sutras of Patanjali listed practices on physical and mental well-being, Aryabhatta's concept of zero and Sushruta Samhita are considered to be foundational sources of modern science and mathematics. Similarly, Arthasasthra's advocacy for balancing ethics and realpolitik and Ramayana and Maharabharata's models of ethical conduct based on Dharma (Moral Law) continues to be relevant today. At this backdrop, the Conference invites discourses on the relevance of Bharatiya Knowledge System in the 21st century. We seek scholarly contributions that focus on innovating approaches through which Bharatiya Knowledge System can be applied to state and administration, while fostering inclusive participation. Ancient Texts also contain strategies for crisis management, resource allocation and economic management, reflecting a profound understanding of historical, social, political, and economic, sustainability and resilience.

The exploration extends to the application of Bharatiya Knowledge system to the fields of philosophy, literature, history, anthropology, education, state and statecraft, public administration, public policy, economy, commerce and management, health and medicine, Yoga and sports, mathematics, science and technology and any other relevant field. Finally, the conference aims to foster a dialogue that bridges the gap between ancient wisdom and modern challenges, enriching our understanding regarding the application of Bharatiya Knowledge System in today's world.
