Jaitley to bigwigs in finance and economics, such as Ruchir Sharma, chief global strategist at Morgan Stanley, and YES Bank CEO Rana Kapoor, SRCC's alumni boasts a list full of luminaries.

Mindful of the illustrious legacy, SRCC principal Professor Simrit Kaur has in the past six months made a concerted effort to ensure that the college stays ahead of the curve in research and academics. She is introducing value-added courses that the students can opt for. Some of the subjects are big data analytics, public-private partnership and risk management.

from other colleges in Delhi as well as other cities to work in collaborative groups on small research-based projects, which are then mentored by 20 faculty members from the science departments at the college. The institute also conducts a week-long 'INSPIRE' internship camp for 250 students from the top schools in the national capital who have opted for science in Class 11.

Not just summer camps, Miranda is also known for the innovative courses it offers in order to expand the range of its students' skills. And this despite being bound within the traditional university system. Realising the need to introduce contemporary preoccupations in the sciences, the college has proceeded to offer several add-on courses—Green Chemistry being among the first ones to be offered along with courses on Nanochemistry, Medical Biotechnology, Bioinformatics and Silico Medicine, Operation Research and Data Science and Analytics.

As part of a unique practice, the college brings in top scientists from research institutes to deliver lectures on the campus and conduct interactive sessions with students to introduce them to a whole new learning experience. The Mirandians themselves go on to conduct specially designed workshops for school students.

Students, therefore, are exposed to a strong research culture at Miranda. 'Miranda innovates' is a tenet the college steadfastly abides by. Pedagogy within the classroom is largely interactive. Miranda has always had a tradition of a strong bond between faculty and students, which is translating into faculty-student teams collaborating on research projects.

Jaitley to bigwigs in finance and economics, such as Ruchi Sharma, chief global strategist at Morgan Stanley, and YES Bank CEO Rana Kapoor, SRCC's alumni boasts a list full of luminaries.

Mindful of the illustrious legacy, SRCC principal Professor Simrit Kaur has in the past six months made a concerted effort to ensure that the college stays ahead of the curve in research and academics. She is introducing value-added courses that the students can opt for. Some of the subjects are big data analytics, public-private partnership and risk management.

MUST HAVE TRAITS TO BE A SOCIAL WORKER

By Anu Aga

Empathy "That is translated into action by reaching out."

Be upfront "There will be multiple expectations from the clients; one needs to be clear about what can be delivered and what cannot."

Resilience "To be able to deal with various issues. The ability to admit when something has gone wrong and be transparent with all stakeholders."

Collaborative "Instead of trying to do everything by oneself or the organisation, find creative ways to work with other NGOs and, if possible, government agencies."

Analyse "In any situation, come to grips with the main issues along with the client, not rushing to solve

Aim for self-sufficiency "After a period of time, the clients need to be able to take care of some social work on their own and not be dependent on the agency."

The writer specialised in mental health and social work. She is the former person of the year and a Rajya Sabha MP.

form of painting and create a supplementary source of livelihood.

The social work programme continues to be one of the most sought after at TISS since its inception in 1936. With 40 teachers and 500 students in the post graduation programme and 50-60 research students, social work also has the largest representation on campus. Currently, the department offers nine two-year-long master's programmes in community organisation and development practice, Dalit and tribal social work, health and mental health, livelihood and social innovation, criminology and justice, women-centred practice, disability and studies, children and families, and livelihood and social innovation. Of these, Jha says, most enrolments come for the first and last courses.

It's the field action projects that continue to be TISS's most valued asset, bringing both national and international recognition. "At any given point of time, we have 40 active projects," says Jha. Some of the prominent ones include Prayas which works with entrepreneurs and their families predominantly in Maharashtra; Koshish, a programme in aid of the homeless population; Women's Cell, which works with victims of domestic violence and with police stations in eight states by establishing special cells; and iAccess for the disabled community. Located in Deonar which holds India's largest dumping ground and the M-East ward, where 78 per cent population resides in slums, the institute also works towards improving the health, education and sanitation of the local population.

Some of its field projects have received government recognition. Childline, first set up by erstwhile professor Jeroo Billimoria in 1996, is now a project under the Union ministry of women and child development. Its helpline number provides assistance to distressed children from vulnerable back-
