International Webinar on Future of Crime Scene Investigation

The Unit of Forensic Science, Department of Life Sciences organised an International Webinar titled 'Future of Crime Scene Investigation' on 26 March 2021. The webinar aimed to look into newer and more modern avenues in crime scene investigation to expose the students to more contemporary updated knowledge. Shri. Maithili Sharan Gupta, IPS, National President Crime Free Bharat Mission & Former DGP (Police Reforms) of Madhya Pradesh inaugurated the webinar and explained the scope, working, and future ambitions of the Crime Free Bharat mission under the Govt. Of India. He praised the administration of Kristu Jayanti College for organising a webinar on such a needful topic. He encouraged the delegates and students to take part and be benefitted through the one-day webinar. Fr. Dr. Augustine George, Principal, Kristu Jayanti College (Autonomous), Bangalore, highlighted the need for Forensic Science in today's society. He also reiterated the need for practical knowledge being imparted to today's students and how it is necessary to help them achieve great things in their career.

The webinar had four diverse topics related to crime scene investigation - Accident Investigation and its Dynamics, 3D Crime Scene Scanning - Evolution, Documenting and Analysing a Fire Scene, Bullet Trajectory and Blood Spatter Analysis 3D and Crime Scene Reconstruction: From the Foundation to the Future. Each topic dealt with different domains in the field of crime scene investigation, and it left a lasting message in the student's minds. Dr. Sally Lukose, Professor and Dean of School of Allied Health Sciences in Sharda University, Greater Noida, spoke about accident investigation and its dynamics. Dr. Sally started the session by breaking down the meaning behind the word 'accident' and explained how it is usually perceived. She discussed the statistics of road accidents as given by WHO (World Health Organization) and offered specific solutions to prevent such accidents from occurring. Dr. Sally spoke about a very useful technology called PC Crash, which helps in the 3D reconstruction of an accident scene, which will help investigators better understand an accident's happenings. The session was concluded by Dr. Sally answering some queries about the topic. She also implanted the idea in the participants that accident investigation should be looked at as an interdisciplinary approach.

The second session on "3D Crime Scene Scanning - Evolution, Documenting and Analysing a Fire Scene" was taken by Dr. Satendra Yadav, Public Safety Expert & Crime Scene Trainer, Leica Geosystems, Switzerland. He talked about 3D Crime Scene Scanning and its Evolution. He started by explaining how 3D scanning technology began and why documentation is necessary, especially when it comes to court trials. He then proceeded to show various technologies that could be used to document and take necessary measurements of the crime scene. Dr Yadav gave instances from real-life cases that he had worked on where he had used photogrammetry as a means of documenting a crime scene. He further explained why measurements are an important factor in the documentation of a scene and introduced a new technology that could provide accurate measurements.

Mr Brad Joice, Detective Sergeant, York Regional Police, Ontario, Canada, spoke about "Bullet Trajectory and Blood Spatter Analysis in 3D". The session focused on roles played by a crime scene investigator, the changes brought about in forensic science with this advancing technology and emphasised the accuracy of 3D technology in ballistics and blood pattern analysis. Reminiscing the scenes from the famous series-Dexter, blood pattern analysis was put to light by Mr. Brad, focusing on how the string line method and older software programs like Backtrack from 1987 to Hemostat from 2006, can be a very time consuming and lesser efficient approach in comparison with the currently available devices and methods. To young forensic science students, the session taken up by Mr. Brad was not just engaging but also an interesting learning platform that opened their eyes to how important it is to adapt and adopt to the changing times keeping in mind the basic principles that are part of the regular curriculum.

Mr. Zachery Kowalske, Detective & Crime Scene Reconstructionist at Roswell Police Department, Georgia, United States, took the last session on "Crime Scene Reconstruction: From the Foundation to the Future". Mr. Zachery touched upon the different crime scene reconstruction techniques covered in the previous sessions and explained how they occupy the recent trend in crime scene documentation. He showed glimpses of different textbooks and research papers that have devised new crime scene reconstruction techniques in the past. The resource person finally explained the advantages and tamper-proof nature of 3D crime scene documentation technology. He used two case examples from his field experience to explain the crime scene documentation techniques that are put in practice and how blood pattern analysis and bullet trajectory analysis help in crime scene reconstruction to a great deal. He took the delegates and students through the process of crime scene documentation used in two high profile cases that he had investigated. Students could understand the great detail to which a crime scene has to be analysed to make it able to be reconstructed in the lab.

In his address, Dr. Kumar spoke about the unethical practices of Google and Facebook, their involvement in a scandal that leaked user data and the corruption within these big technology companies erodes their credibility. He opined that monopolistic practices of such organisations disrupt the social and political compass. Dr. Kumar went on to add that the prevalent use of Artificial Intelligence further questions the validity of social media due to vague policies on privacy and its infringement. He drew attention to the dearth of research at these companies. In comparison, Dr. Kumar stated that the trustworthiness of legacy media is still intact.

Further, Dr. Kumar emphasised on independent journalism being the need of the hour and appealed for its support in the current scenario. Like most mainstream media, in his opinion, had commercialised news, he stressed the necessity of consuming news from alternative sources. The younger generation, he said, is unable to distinguish between 'influencers' and 'legitimate journalists' due to their obsession with social media and internet celebrity culture.

Dr. Kumar advised that for good journalists' public interest is essential, but not at the cost of journalistic integrity while also reminding the participants that the media is the watchdog of the society.
