PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

TRANSDISCIPLINARY CAPABILITIES OF TRANSFORMATIVE EDUCATION

The college strives to create an environment that nurtures talent and empowers students to become competent professionals and responsible citizens. We integrate transdisciplinary practices into the education system, so that our students can develop a deeper understanding of interconnectedness, empathy, and cultural competence. Our academic endeavors prepare them to be innovative and socially responsible leaders through capability enhancement programmes and collaborative projects across disciplines. Moreover, the teachers benefit from cross-sectoral capabilities, as they are encouraged to adopt dynamic and creative teaching methods that resonate with the diverse learning styles of their students, catering to multi-disciplinary perspectives. The transformative power of these capabilities in education holds the promise of empowering a new generation of well-rounded and globally conscious individuals who can tackle the challenges of the future with confidence and resilience.

In an era characterised by rapid technological advancements, intricate global challenges, and evolving societal dynamics, the traditional boundaries of knowledge fail to navigate through the complexities of academia today. Embracing a transdisciplinary framework transcends traditional disciplinary boundaries and encourages collaboration among various fields of knowledge, allowing students to explore complex real-world challenges from multiple perspectives. Transdisciplinary capabilities have the potential to revolutionise the education sector by fostering a holistic and interconnected approach to learning. This approach not only equips learners with a diverse set of skills but also nurtures their generic and domain specific skills, which are essential for thriving in an everchanging global landscape.

Jayantian Glimpses enlists all the efforts taken by our faculty members and students in incorporating a transdisciplinary prism to their process of learning. I appreciate the teamwork of the Editorial team of Jayantian Glimpses for bringing out this issue.

Transdisciplinary capabilities have the potential to revolutionise the education sector by fostering a holistic and interconnected approach to learning. This approach not only equips learners with a diverse set of skills but also nurtures their generic and domain specific skills, which are essential for thriving in an ever-changing global landscape.

Dr. C. Nagadeepa started the session by introducing various tools to collect data, wherein one method was Google forms using closed-ended questions. The speaker addressed on Statistics tools offering the capability to add new, custom analyses to Microsoft excel. The accuracy of Excel built-in statistics calculations has often been questioned. Excel can perform a very large number of functions, which are formulas that perform a specific calculation beyond simple mathematical calculations. When the FUNCTION option in the INSERT menu is selected, it will display a large number menu of functions. This task of Excel is more useful for researchers for the simple statistical and econometric analysis of data. Excel's FUNCTION option is very simple and hence, user friendly than other available statistical packages like SPSS, LIMDEP, STATA, STATISTICA, GRITL, E-VIEWS, etc. But one thinks that the users should keep in mind that Excel's data analysis wizard is not helpful for advanced data analysis purposes. Rather it is best suited for beginners, particularly for students and entry-level researchers.

Dr. C.Nagadeepa spoke of Mean and Mode, showing us how descriptive and data analysis is done. Furthermore, T-test and Anova were also taught by using add-on tools in MS Excel, and each student had their own set of data on which they operated.
